Advanced Certificate in Counselling

輔導高等證書

Alternative Approaches to Counselling 另類輔導方法 (9 credits)

This course aims to introduce students to the theories and practice of selected alternative approaches to counselling, such as art therapy and play therapy*. These approaches not only complement the traditional mode of “talking” therapy, but will also expand students’ helping repertoire. Students will also be given the opportunity to experience the healing processes of the selected approaches.

*The approaches to be introduced may vary, depending on the specialties of the instructors.

Developmental Psychology 發展心理學 (9 credits)

This course introduces the major theories and concepts in the study of lifespan development: From infancy, childhood, adolescence, adulthood, to late adulthood. Special emphasis will be placed on the physical, cognitive, and social development at each of the developmental stage. The socio-cultural and environmental context within which individuals developed will also be discussed.

Introduction to Counselling 輔導入門 (9 credits)

This course introduces students to the major theoretical perspectives in counselling psychology. The emphasis will be on the basic assumptions of each perspective, the therapeutic process as well as the counselling skills involved. Students will further explore the ethical and contemporary issues in counselling psychology.

Introduction to Psychology 心理學導論 (15 credits)

This course introduces the basic principles of psychology and offers a preliminary survey of representative works carried out in various areas of psychological investigation such as: sensation and perception, learning, memory, cognition, language and intelligence, aspects of human behaviour and the dynamics of motivation. There will be an opportunity to investigate some specific areas at length.

Micro-skills in Counselling 輔導技巧工作坊 (9 credits)

Students will be divided into small groups to learn and practice micro-counselling skills*. This course puts special emphasis on experiential learning through skill practices, demonstration and role-play.

*The skills to be introduced include engagement, paraphrasing, empathy, reframing and so on.

Self-understanding and Communication Skills 人際溝通與自我認識 (9 credits)

This course aims to enable students to achieve self-understanding and self-awareness, and to develop their interpersonal communication skills. The content will cover processes and patterns of human communication, value clarification, self-exploration of strengths and weaknesses, and principles of effective interpersonal communication.
